The University uses the Intent to Enroll, which includes an expiration date, as an enrollment management tool and links it with required orientation for freshmen and recommended advising workshop for transfer students in order to gauge and control the yield from the applicant pool and to manage available resources to support enrollment.

Policy on Intent to Enroll

For First Time Freshmen, the terms of the “intent” agreement expire on the date that requires freshmen to register and pay for required orientation. Students who have submitted an Intent to Enroll form, but did not register for Orientation by the published deadline will be put on a waitlist by the Admissions and Recruitment office. Students on the admissions waitlist will be allowed to register for Orientation and enroll at the University on a space available basis.

Transfer students whose Intent to Enroll forms are received after the published deadline will have their deposits returned and be offered the option to be on a waitlist. Enrollment opportunities will be offered based on space availability.
